

The move by the NAB to stop XM from providing instant Traffic & Weather is not in the best interests of the public. XM's premium service allows listeners to choose their content without being bombarded by unwanted advertisements. For those of us with increasingly limited time, we appreciate the XM model and are willing to pay a premium for a service which can deliver the content that interests us without commercial interruption. Broadcasting traffic and weather information without commercial interruption augments those members of the public who are willing to pay a premium to avoid irrelevant content; XM should be allowed to provide this valuable news service to its customer base.
